

EQUATIONS

Why

Definition

An equation is a statement of equality between two objects.

For example, if we have an object a and an object b , then an equation is

$$a = b.$$

Equations are useful when we do not know the particular identity of an object, but only that it belongs to some set. In this case, we call the equation indeterminate

Equations

Identity

Objects

