

Conditional Probability Mass Functions

1 Why

The conditional probability of any two events defines a new probability mass function over the set of outcomes which is in the second event. The conditional probability of an outcome is the probability of the second event divided into the probability of outcome .